A reporter of The Tombstone met J. B. Angus the Fremont street produce merchant this morning and thought by the look of his countenance that he had won a fortune in the Louisiana State Lottery or that he had found Abbott's wonderful caves, but upon inquiry he learned that the cause of all Mr. Angus' good nature was because his wife had presented him with a ten-pound son and heir this morning.

Miss Mary Tack received a letter last evening from Mr. Cline, the partner of "Slicky" Abbott, dated at Guaymas, in which he stated that Abbott received $500 from him, and never had no caves or bullion, but left him at Tepic sick and penniless, with the hotel bill for both of them. He writes Mary Tack that he will leave Guaymas for Tombstone just as soon as he is well enough.

Please send up some flour sacks for Sunday."

Richmond Hudson Killed by Barney Riggs.

Late Wednesday evening Judge Nichols received a dispatch from Mr. DeLong, of Fort Bowie, stating that Barney Riggs had killed Richmond Hudson, at the ranch of Mr. Osborne, seven miles east of Dos Cabezas. Constable Hudson was informed of the killing, and he, with E. F. Conover and M. Marion, immediately left for the scene of the tragedy. On Thursday M. Moss, better known as "Dead-shot," who was present at the murder, was in Wilcox, and gave the following version of the affair: He says that just at dusk Wednesday evening, some Mexicans came to Osborne's place, driving about thirty head of horses, and asked permission to corral them for the night. Permission was given them, and the horses had just been corralled, and Richmond Hudson, who assisted in the work, was standing in the gate, when a shot was fired and Hudson fell to the ground. Two more shots rapidly followed, all taking effect—the first entering the head about two inches over the right ear, another in the neck and one in the hand. The shooting was done by Barney Riggs, who had approached the corral afoot unseen by any one present. Riggs evidently had a horse concealed near by, as he disappeared immediately after the murder. He went to the house of his cousin, Thomas Riggs, where his family is stopping, told them that he had killed Hudson, and then taking the best horse on the ranch, rode off and nothing has been heard of him since.

There was a loud bang standing between the two men, which at last culminated in this murder. They were both old residents of Dos Cabezas, and well known all through this section. The murdered man was about twenty-three years old, and was generally well liked.

On Thursday Justice Nichols went to the place of Osborne to hold an inquest on the body of Hudson, and up to the hour of going to press he has not returned; neither has Constable Hudson.—Stockman.

An Immense Block.

This morning, while a reporter of The Tombstone was wandering around town in search of items, he dropped into the carriage and blacksmith shop of L. E. Page, on the corner of Third and Allen streets, and found the proprietor at the forge taking out of the fire one of the most complicated pieces of iron, but refrained from asking any questions, as this old man who makes iron bend to his will, looked very cross with the glow of the fire upon his face and the perspiration rolling down from his brow, and thought that we were gazing at old Vulcan himself and we saw that it took great skill to master the difficult piece of work in his hands; but by waiting our curiosity was satisfied, for we saw the massive piece of hot iron twisted and turned into all shapes, and finally it turned out to be a steel hay fork, with a capacity of lifting four thousand pounds of hay from the wagon to the hay stack, and one which will prove a great saving to hay makers.

Mr. Page is overworked with work of all kinds, which comes to him, not on account of his smooth and polished manners, but from his superior workmanship. It is doubtful if he has his equal as a workman on the Pacific coast; if he has, we have never come across any of their work. We predict for Mr. Page one of the largest and most prosperous businesses in his line of any in the Territory.

Unless the Nimrods do not Tell.
In a very few weeks the hunting party of Chicago gentlemen, in the special car, will be among us. They will follow their usual course—shoot their imported dogs by mistake and get run back into town by some farmer with a fourtined pitchfork, whose calf they have blazed away at under the impression that it was an antelope.—Estelina (Dakota) Bell.

Johnny Williams has received the contract from the Copper Queen Mining Company, for the removal of the machinery from the Boston Mill on the river to Bisbee, and is already at work getting the machinery ready for removal. He is ably assisted in the work by Billy Sprague.

The President's Money.

The President of the United States always uses new money. He never gets any old notes, except in change when making purchases. His salary is paid him in monthly installments—$4,166.66 on the last day of each month—and the treasurer always makes it a point to send him notes of the latest issue. Mr. Cleveland, as his predecessors have done, keeps a private bank account with Riggs & Co., and makes a deposit of the first of every month, reserving enough from his salary to pay current expenses and setting a good example by putting the rest aside for a rainy day. I am told that his account has shown a balance as large as $35,000, as he has an income aside from his official salary. While he has never been a money-getter and has earned in his profession all he has ever made, Mr. Cleveland has an economical disposition and no luxurious tastes like his immediate predecessor. Before he entered public life, when he was making from $10,000 to $15,000 a year by his practice and could have lived like a lord, his expenses, I am told, were never more than $2,500 a year, and he enjoyed life as much as most men do. His frugal habits were acquired in youth, for he was not born with a golden or even a silver spoon in his mouth, and he has found his pleasure in hard work.—Washington Capital.

Native Knows a Ball Over the Fence.

The negroes say that a ball of fire as big as a washtub passed with a whizzing noise over Dalton a few nights ago, and at the same time the moon, which had been riding serenely in the heavens, turned a blood red color and danced a jig in the sky.—Savannah News.

He Returned His Pension.

Hon. R. Frazer, of Mt. Carroll Illinois, who served three years during the war, and was captured in October, 1861 and remained a prisoner until the close of the war, has just sent the following letter to the commissioner of pensions:

MT. CARROLL ILLINOIS.
September 9, 1885.
General John C. Black, Washington D. C.

Dear Sir—Herewith I return for cancellation pension certificate No. 192,581 issued July 9 1881, for $2 per month. The sum was too paltry originally. I made an application for an increase and last July was before a board of examiners. A few days ago I received an official notice from your bureau that the claim was "rejected." I decline to be a further pensioner on the pitiful bounty of a government that allows its soldiers to suffer the torments of the damned in Andersonville prison. I decline to allow any government to longer say what I endured for it in that reeking hell can be balanced for $24 a year. I decline to allow a government to make my present health and my months of starvation and exposure in Cahaba and Millen, at Savannah, Blackhear and Andersonville at the sum of $2 per month.

I therefore return my certificate and ask that my name be stricken from the pension roll of the United States government.

Yours Truly,
DON. R. FRAZER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—Acting Secretary Fairchild has authorized the re-opening of the mint at Carson City, Nevada, as an assay office for the receipt of deposits of bullion. This action was taken on the recommendation of the Director of the mint, and with the full approval of the President. It is intended as an experiment, as it is said at the department that it is doubtful whether the deposits at the mints will warrant an assay office. Its future operation as a coinage mint will depend altogether upon the extent of its deposits.

One of his eyelids was burned off, and his face was otherwise mutilated and torn, the disfigurements being permanent. It is claimed by the plaintiff that the experiment was being performed under the direction of a professor, and that he supposed he was working in safety, and that through the carelessness of the professor in charge the accident occurred.
